Tips for the first timer

- Always let someone know where you are going and when you intend to be back.
- You may fish in any stream from a boat or while walking on the stream bed, regardless of who owns the adjacent land. However, you MUST get the owner's permission to cross private land to get to a stream.
- Try and be as quiet as possible when approaching the water. Trout are very aware of any changes in the scenery and the skyline, and that includes a group of people standing on the edge of their water hole. If you are wearing bright clothing and making a lot of noise, this makes your task a little harder.
- Trout generally feed at dawn and on dusk. You will probably see them 'rising' at these times which will indicate how active the fish are and even what they are eating. However you don't have to limit your fishing to these times, but if you are fishing in the middle of the day, try to fish in cool spots; in shade, in deep pools and at the base of runs, or even in the runs where the water is more aerated, as trout like to stay cool.
- Have a look around the area where you intend to fish.
- Take note of any insects that are plentiful, as they could be what the trout are feeding on. If you are fly or lure fishing, try to choose the lure that is most similar to the insects that you find. If you don't have any bait with you, have a look around for a good spot to dig a few worms. An old fallen tree is usually a good supply of insect larvae and grubs.
- It may sound silly, but try and imagine where you would be hiding if you were a fish. They like to sit in under the bank or in a little nook or cranny during the day to get out of the hot sun. However, at feeding time, they are closer to the surface and moving around more.

- Trout hate being hooked just as much as any fish, so prepare yourself for a bit of a fight when you catch one. It is a good idea to have a landing net with you because a lot of fish are lost attempting to get them out of the water.
- Obviously if your bait is being ignored, try something different.
- There are a lot of Craybobs or Yabbies (small fresh water crayfish) and they will eat anything you put in the water, including your bait. There isn't anything you can do to stop them from stealing your bait. You may also catch a turtle or an eel, both of which will feel like a snag because they are so large.
- If there has been a lot of rain and the water is dirty and flooding, you may want to try again another day. In flood conditions the fish stay pretty quiet.
- If you are fishing small waters, try casting at the base of the 'runs' because there is food being washed into the water and your bait will easily be mistaken as a tasty morsel.
- Wear good shoes, as snakes are active during summer.

Trout Fishing

Cool running waters of the highlands

The cool, clear running waters of the highlands provide the perfect environment for trout populations to live and breed successfully and Walcha Bowling Recreation & Fishing Club ensures that there is always oncoming stocks by replenishing the streams annually.

Each season, tourists and keen anglers come from all parts of Australia and even from overseas to try their luck at catching one of these beautiful fish and you can join in the fun. The whole family can enjoy a day out fishing with trout waters easily accessible by car – some as close as 15 minutes from town.

With some basic fishing gear and a little patience, you could be hauling in a decent fish for dinner, as trout are an excellent table fish either whole or as fillets or cutlets. If you are camping out, it is recommended you have some foil and lemon handy. Nothing tastes better than fresh fish off the barbeque!

Eastern Bass

Riverside and Macleay Gorges Wilderness Areas

Bass are surface feeders and are caught most prolifically with lures or flies with a bit of persistence. They have been known to take a worm but it depends on the season as to what they will be biting on. If you are lucky enough to catch one – hang on for dear life – as they usually like a fight. Because of this, and being a larger sized fish, you will need to use a heavier line and hooks than what you would for trout. Catch and release methods are encouraged in the Macleay Gorges Wilderness due to stocks decreasing as access to fishing areas increases.
